The reality is, the company's employees are well trained in technical expertise and the subtleties of clients' needs but still lack the interpersonal skills needed to enhance their effectiveness. Some training managers have long been suggesting for the inclusion of interpersonal skills as one of the core subjects in the training program. Irrespective of how technically qualified a person is in accounting management, getting along with the customer is one key to success. Overconfidence and ignorance are a bad combination for a consultant. But line managers point out that the company has conducted training in client and customer relations, only two years ago. They added that there is no improvement in customer relations and money spent on such training is not justified. The senior managers of the company feel that much investment on training is unnecessary as some of the trained employees join other organizations.

But most of the managers feel that investment in training is essential but the dilemma is which part of the skill should receive more attention and investment.

Questions:

Will training help to solve the problem of interpersonal relations?

Is training cost effective?

Is Arvind Finance training centre provides the right knowledge and skills?

Bitter it may taste, shrill it may sound and sleepless nights it may cause, but it is true. In a major shake up, Airbus - the European aircraft manufacturer - has thrown a big shock to its employees. Before coming to the details of the shock, a peep into the company's resume.

- Name: Airbus
- Created: 1970
- President, CEO: Louis Gallois
- Employees: 57,000
- Turnover (2006): 26 bn (Euro)
- Total aircraft sold (Feb. 2007): 7187
- Delivered 4598
- Headquarters: Toulouse (France)
- Facilities: 16
- Rival: Boeing
Airbus announced on February 27, 2007, that it would shed 10,000 jobs across four European countries and sell six of its units. On the same day the hapless workers did what was expected them - downed tools and staged protests. The protesting workers at Airbus's factory at Meaulte Northern France were seen picketing outside the factory gate after holding up production a day earlier. To be fair to Airbus, its management entered talks with unions before the job loss and sale was formally announced. But the talks did not mollify the agitated workers.

Job shedding and hiring of units are a part of Power 8 restructuring plan unleashed by Airbus to save itself from increasing loss of its ground to the arch rival, Boeing Co. Airbus's Power8 strategy was first mooted in October 2006, but sparked a split between France and Germany over the distribution of job losses and the placement of future ones. Later the two countries agreed to share both job losses and new technology.

The Power8 plan, if finalised, would mean a 9 percent reduction to Airbus's 55,000 employee strength.

Questions:

1) Why should Power8 focus on shedding jobs to save on cost? Are there no alternative strategies?

2) Will the proposed shedding of jobs and sale of six units help Airbus survive the intense competition from Boeing?

   Prakash is an engineer in a large design engineer office. He hails from a poor disciplined family. The family has a rural background. For Prakash, it was “earn while you learn” although till he graduated himself with architecture as his major. Prakash is intelligent, capable and hard working but his main fault is that he does not want to take risks. He hesitates to make decisions by self and often brings petty and routine problems to his boss or to peers for decisions. Whenever he does a design job, he brings it in rough draft to his boss for approval before finalizing it.

   Since Prakash is a capable person, his boss wants to motivate him to be more independent in his work. The boss believes that this approach will improve Prakash's performance, relieve the boss from extra routine, and give Prakash the required self-confidence. However, the boss is not sure how to go about motivating Prakash to give initiative in his work. In the role of the boss, plan how you will motivate Prakash. Give reasons.
